

Mrs Madden's Class News

Friday 22nd November 2024

This week...

The children have been superstars practising for 'The Big, Little Nativity'. They are singing the songs beautifully and are excited to practise on the stage next week. School will be providing all the costumes. I'll send details of what the children have been cast as next week – although I'm sure they've already told you!

We have enjoyed lots more water-play this week, treating them to warm water as it's been so cold outside. The block play creations continue to impress us, they are using the available resources so creatively.

It was lovely to hear from Dan, the guitar teacher, that our children who are having lessons with him, have been the best group two weeks running. He was impressed with their concentration, effort and most importantly, fabulous manners! We're super proud of them.

Next week...

Our Nativity practises will continue and the children will be fitted for their costumes. We will be starting Level 3 Phonics; I will send the Level 3 Phonics cards home with Reception. These cards can be left at home rather than in book bags.

Reception parents, please sign your child's reading diary each time they read their Rhino Readers book/practise their phonics cards. We count up how many times they've read each week and they build up points for a reading certificate – bronze, silver, gold and platinum. The more they read, the more points towards the certificates they receive.

Have a wonderful weekend,

Mrs Madden 😊
